Sir or Madam:

To put it simply, the proposed settlement of the Microsoft Antitrust Suit is weak in restrictions and lacking in the realm of enforcement. Instead of being a solution, it simply perpetuates the problem. Microsoft has consistently shown itself to be in contempt of the DoJ, and of any agreements it has made with that entity. Do you really believe that they, for a second, intend to abide by this agreement. Do you truly believe that Microsoft fears another legal battle with the DoJ after having twice now fought you to a stalemate?

What needs to be required of Microsoft is a capitulation of Microsoft of the part of what types of software they own and develop. Microsoft owns and develops games, operating systems, web browsers, office suites, and many other software tools. It is time for Microsoft to relinquish some of the markets it has dominated for so long.

Sincerely,
